Those Who Attended the International Convention in Washington During the Week--Wyming Camp Meeting Will Open on Aug. 12. Former Scrantonian Organized in the West--Brief Notes.

In a small dining room, poorly ventilated, but whose walls are tastefully decorated with many Bible quotations, is being carried on a work that comparatively few know little about. The Scranton Rescue Mission, at 111 Franklin avenue, is doing a religious work in Scranton, second to no other like institution in the city. Night after night, men of all walks of life wander into this mission, and there hear the word of God preached in a practical and saving manner. Persons who do not attend church, are constrained to come to the mission. There they are sure of a hearty welcome, a warm hand shake, and a kind word. It would be an inspiration to many of our church going population, if they would just drop into this mission some evening, and see the room filled with earnest listeners.

It might be of interest to some to know that during the past three months there were held 102 meetings, attended by 4,712 people. The management is now contemplating the holding of outdoor meetings each evening just prior to the regular evening service in the mission house. This plan has been tried in some of the largest cities, with gratifying results. In addition to the religious features of the work, there are regular lodgings furnished free of charge to those who are in want, and have no place to stay the night. During the past three months 119 free lodgings were supplied by the mission.

Camber W. Evans, formerly of Scranton, and well known here, has been ordained at Zion, Iowa, to the ministry of the Congregational church. He was ordained by the Ecclesiastical council.

Mr. Byers, Peckville; Mrs. Johnson, Peckville; the Misses Ellis of Carbondale; Harry Benjamin, Nicholson. Among those who went over the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road were: Rev. George E. Guild, Physical Director E. P. Hoff, of the Young Men's Christian association; G. W. Bonded, Miss May Benedict, Roy Atherton, Miss A. Davies, Miss Von Storch, Mrs. E. A. Reynolds. On the 11th, however, most of the cottagers will be occupying their camp-ground homes. A few families have already established themselves there.
